

CALIFORNIA LAW ALERT

Voting Leave: What California Employers Need to Know

California law provides eligible employees with time off to vote in statewide elections and requires employers to post a voting-leave notice.

THE LAW

California Elections Code §14000

- Applies when a voter does not have sufficient time outside working hours to vote in a statewide election.
- An employee may take enough working time to vote without loss of pay. No more than two hours of that time must be paid.
- Time off should be at the beginning or end of the regular shift, whichever provides the most free time for voting and the least time away from work, unless the employer and employee mutually agree otherwise.
- If, by the third working day before the election, the employee knows or has reason to believe time off will be needed, the employee must give the employer at least two working days' notice.

POSTING REQUIREMENTS

- California's DIR requires all employers to keep a voting-leave notice posted conspicuously at the workplace, if practicable, or where employees can see it when coming to or leaving work, not less than 10 days before every statewide election.
- An employer-developed voting notice is permitted if it conforms to the required language.
- This requirement applies to all employers.

Voting leave is separate from accrued vacation/PTO.

EMPLOYER CHECKLIST

- ✓ Post the required voting notice at least 10 days before the statewide election.
- ✓ Be prepared for voting-leave requests with as little as two working days' notice.
- ✓ Up to 2 hours of voting leave may be paid when the statutory conditions apply.
- ✓ Document requests and coordinate the timing of leave consistent with the law.
